

A student of Roger Grainger's being interviewed in Ejan ("What's Good") magazine, 2012 annual issue...

Translation of Student Interview (excerpt):

“At first, the student studied the communication skills for the community, like for restaurants and other places. But he wanted to focus on 3 skills---giving presentations, speaking in meetings, and conducting negotiations. So Roger customized lesson plans for the student.

In class, Roger checked the student's presentation slides, and in front of Roger, the student delivered his presentation. After that, Roger provided feedback for the student about the presentation. Sometimes, the student took his lesson at ECS in the morning then in the afternoon he went to work and gave the presentation. This arrangement was very helpful.”